Life 100,000 Years Ago.
Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men who lived 100,000 years ago. When life was in constant danger from wild beasts. To-day the danger, as shown by A. W. Brown of Alzheimer, Mo., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr.
King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Lungs, Colds, obstinate Coughs, and pre-

Sees Mother Grow Young.
"It would be hard to overestimate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick of Danforth, Me.
"Although past seventy she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could not sleep, eat drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders to her health."

COURTESY IN THE STREET CAR.

Something of a Reversal of the General Rule.

"Do you suppose that's an effect of the recent agitation of women's rights?" asked the man, indicating with a nod of his head a scene that was taking place in an "L" car in the homeward rush. His companion looked and saw a slender, handsomely gowned woman offer her seat to a young man who, in the crush, was standing in front of her and was carrying an armful of large, heavy books.

The young man looked rather embarrassed and bravely declined with a pleasant little smile, which was all he could accomplish in lieu of raising his hat with his heavily incumbered hands.

"Well, then," said the lady com-posedly, resuming her seat, "let me hold the books in my lap."

"That would certainly be kind, if you don't mind," consented the youth, relinquishing his load; and when the lady reached her station, leaving her seat to him, he thanked her for her thoughtfulness with fully as much gratitude as a woman would have expressed for a similar courtesy from a man—perhaps with more appreciation, the experience being more rare.

AT HARVARD FIFTY YEARS AGO.

N. S. Shaler Tells Us of the Life of a Senior.

He was a senior in Harvard college and had a well-deserved name for scholarship in the classics, as well as for a miscellaneous assortment of talents and knowledge. He was reputed to be the best player of the game of checkers in the country; knew the political history of the United States amazingly well; was learned in pugilism, having at his tongue's end the story of all the prize-fights of recent times; withal he was the merriest little man I ever seen. I well recall my first morning with him, when, after going over the best of what I could and could not do, he asked me if I could box. I pleaded guilty to some knowledge of that ignoble art. At that time I had not learned of his interest in it, and thought that I would be lowered in his eyes by the confession. To my surprise, indeed to my horror, for I had a swordsman's contempt for the business, he insisted on my having a bout with him at once.—N. S. Shaler's Autobiography, in the Atlantic.

Two Marks of Beauty.

Beautiful eyes and brows are, in one sense, a special gift of nature.
Many a plain woman is redeemed by fine eyes; many a pretty face spoiled by red-rimmed, dull, lusterless eyes.
But at the same time a great deal may be done to make even unpromising eyes clear and attractive, to render eyes which are only passably pretty really beautiful.

Attention to the general health will go far to make the eyes clear and bright and prevent fatigue, even when they are called upon to do a great deal of work.

Have you never noticed the dull eyes of a person afflicted with dyspepsia, the yellow tinge of overfeeding and neglected liver; the lusterless eyes of the woman who sleeps in an ill-ventilated room, who takes no exercise and spends all her spare time reading novels over the fire?

When It's a Nude.

"The Bather" was the title of the young painter's picture, the first that he had ever shown. It hung, unnoticed, on the line.

"But," said his friend, "you have done nothing to draw a crowd!"
"I've done my best work," said the young painter.

"Fudge," was the retort. "Work draws, but there are better magnets.
At the Paris exhibitions every artist, until he makes a name, uses some device to keep a crowd about his daubs.
"A painting like 'The Bather' always, in Paris, has the model, very beautif-fully dressed, strolling idly back and forth near it. The resemblance between her and it is at once perceived.
And the result is the greatest curiosity —an immense crowd—a tremendous hit."

To Save Horses from Fire.

When a horse is released from his stall during a fire, says a technical paper, he will not leave the stable, for the stall is the only place in which he believes himself to be safe. A new patented device, which consists of a pipe running through the stall to the outside of the stable, is designed to cure this. In case of fire a turn of a handle brings a hose nozzle into position and a stream of water pours over the head and shoulders of the horse, which drives him into the gangway, from which it becomes a comparatively easy matter to lead him into the street.

At One Shot.

"A sportsman of great imaginative gifts and fond of telling his exploits, related that at one shot he had brought down two partridges and a hare. His explanation was that although he had only hit one partridge the bird in falling had clutched at another partridge and brought that to earth entangled in its claws. "But how about the hare?" he was asked. "Oh!" was the calm reply, "my gun kicked and I fell on the hare as it ran past."—The Sketch.

Forgot.

Ryer—Why so sad, old man?
Dyer—Somebody promised to loan me $10 to-day and I've forgotten who it was.
